BLESSED VALENTINE'S DAY

Dear friends, let us love one another, for love comes from God. 1 John 4:7

Valentine's Day was always a favorite time in elementary school. Everyone would make their Valentine's box, decorating it with red and white paper, adding a great variety of hearts, ribbons, lace and stickers. The more the better! You would put your Valentine's Box out on the counter with all the other student's boxes. The next day, Valentine's Day, we'd bring our valentines to put in each other's boxes, often with candy hearts or chocolate. If there was a special someone you would say or write, "Would you be my Valentine?" and hopefully not feel the pangs of rejection.

Love is big deal, not just on Valentine's Day. As Christians we celebrate God's love for us in Jesus every day. Every time we gather for worship, we proclaim the good news that God loves us so much he gave his only son, Jesus, to die on the cross for our sins.

We wouldn't know it today, but Valentine's Day was originally about God's good news. It is believed that a priest living near Rome, named Valentine, was martyred for his faith on February 14, 270 A.D. He was later made a saint by the church.

The important thing to remember every day is that God is the source of our love, a gift given to us. In English we only have one word for love. In the New Testament, originally written in Greek, there are four words used to describe different kinds of love - Agape, Storge, Phileo and Eros.

Agape Love – is love that comes from God. It is divine love, perfect, pure and self-sacrificing. John 3:16 "For God so loved the world" is an expression of Agape Love.

Storge Love – is best understood as family love. It is the bonds of love between parents and their children.

Phileo Love – is an emotional connection between friends and in community. Philadelphian describes the city of brotherly love.

Eros Love – is romantic or sexual love.

As we enjoy celebrating Valentine's Day, I encourage you to look beyond the Hallmark moment - the cards, candy, a nice dinner out - and remember where this gift of love comes from. Thank God for those you love and those who love you. Take the time to look up two Bible passages. The first is 1 John 4:7-21. Take hold of verse 19, "We love because God first loved us."

Lastly, read 1 Corinthians 13:1-13 best known as the "love chapter." Paul opens with describing how he can have all the things of the world but if he doesn't have love, he is nothing. Love is that important! In verse 4 and following, he describes the real love we all need – Agape love or God's love. Of faith, hope and love, the greatest of these is love. Happy Valentine's Day!

Elections were held for three open Ministry Board positions and three open nominating committee positions.

We are really looking forward to seeing all that God has in store for this year. Please continue to be in prayer for our church and leadership as we move forward.

Thank you to everyone who helped with the annual meeting and our wonderful volunteers who make Peace "worth the drive."

THANK YOU!

Food Shelf Donations were 27 pounds in January. Thank you for your support to the Watertown Friends for Life Food Shelf.

I would like to thank the 21 volunteers who shared their time and talents with us on January 11, including many youth volunteers. This totaled 90 volunteer hours—YEA GOD. We were very productive! Together we were able to tie two graduating senior quilts, sew 12 fleece gaiters for blessing bags, tie eight fleece crib blankets to be donated to Ronald McDonald House, serge 20 large fleece receiving blankets and 19 small flannel receiving blankets for layettes, assemble 40 layettes, and repair the flannel stained glass panels for the sanctuary. We will be holding a similar event next year and want to extend an early invitation for you to join us. You don't have to know how to sew to help out. This was proven by Curt Ziermann and Jim Grosshuesch who proved themselves to be great cutters and tyers. Thanks all!

Setting Media Standards

by Bob Waliszewski

"Bob, call me back as soon as possible."

When I returned the call, my friend John said he needed my advice in a family media matter. His 15-year-old daughter had been watching a Disney Channel program he didn't recognize. The show's "boy-girl thing" made him uncomfortable, and he ordered her to turn off the television. The incident soon escalated into a serious family conflict, with John's wife not agreeing with the snap decision and his daughter bursting into tears as she grudgingly turned off the television. John wanted to know what I thought about the show and whether he had overreacted.

As it turns out, the program in question wasn't perfect, but I didn't think it justified John's response. I told my friend that I saw a bigger problem developing: He risked alienating his daughter by barking orders, without showing fatherly affection and without communicating how a love for Christ was his underlying motivation.

The incident reminded me that while training our kids to be savvy about entertainment is important, any attempt to achieve that with stern, unexplained boundaries is counterproductive and can lead to conflict and rebellion. Done properly, teaching discernment helps kids make better choices for a lifetime, not just while they live under our roof.

As you guide your family through the murky waters of modern entertainment, aim to do so without outbursts, arguments and slammed doors:

Follow Christ's lead

While factors such as age appropriateness and spiritual maturity should also be considered, I believe the lion's share of media choices can be made by asking the question popularized by those old WWJD bracelets: What would Jesus do? If Jesus were walking the planet today, how would He respond if His disciples asked questions like "Should we watch this film?" or "Can we play this video game?"

Help your kids understand that Christ's answers to these questions would be based upon His love for His disciples, not on a desire to squelch their fun. We don't know what Jesus would do or say in every situation, but we can help our kids prayerfully seek what He likely would do based on His holiness and character.

Model it

Nothing spoils the effectiveness of a media discernment message like a parent who doesn't practice what he or she preaches. If your children know you're not applying those principles to your own entertainment choices, you're asking for a fight. Most kids — especially teenagers — know hypocrisy when they see it, and they don't respect it.

For parents of younger children, this doesn't mean you shouldn't watch anything you wouldn't let your kids watch. But ask yourself: Would I want my children watching this when they are older?

Enter your kids' world

There's no need to view your children's media consumption as some secret place with a large "No Parents Allowed" sign above the entrance. Give yourself permission to enter — gently and lovingly. Become familiar with their favorites and those of their friends, and try to understand why these are high on the list. Children give more respect to informed decisions than to knee-jerk reactions.

Promote positive alternatives

Our Creator is not anti-entertainment, and parents shouldn't be either. As you face tough media conversations with your kids, work to find constructive alternatives. I don't mean that entertainment has to be explicitly Christian to get a thumbs-up, but we should strive for entertainment that is positive. It might be a song that promotes forgiveness or gives a boost to volunteerism. It might be a television program that highlights the joy of remodeling someone's dilapidated home or a "David and Goliath" film about working to achieve the near impossible.

Encourage compatible community

When your kids hear other people — pastors, other parents, teachers, friends — echoing your advice on media, they will be more inclined to listen. Talk with other parents. Ask your church leaders to consider including this subject in their ministry plans. Encourage friendships with other kids who make wise entertainment choices. When your children hear from a peer that discernment has value, you may feel less conflict when these difficult media moments occur.

Avoid extremes

As parents make entertainment decisions for their families, many tend to swing between the extremes of permissiveness and legalism. Neither extreme works. A discerning middle ground — one that tests entertainment against biblical standards on a case-by-case basis — is the most reasonable plan of action. Teaching discernment encourages balance, leads to critical thinking, bonds families and gives teens life skills they'll carry throughout adulthood.

January Bible Quiz

Question—Where is the phrase “God will never give you more than you can handle” found in the Bible? This was actually a trick question, as it isn’t in the Bible.

I love Pastor David's annual report this year, especially the first couple of paragraphs. I don't really have an interest in sailing but I love the idea. The freedom and relaxation of opening those sails and not being overly concerned about the direction we're headed. Allowing God to set the direction and just going along for the ride. There is such a warmth and peace to that image.

I wish life could always be like that. Unfortunately, life sometimes rips us apart. Many in our church family have faced devastating situations the last couple of years. We have walked alongside them, feeling some of that pain ourselves, remembering lost loved ones or painful situations we walked through.

In times like this, our ultimate hope is in God alone, we learn to recognize our constant need to depend on Him. This is why Peter instructs the Church to cast our fears, worries, suffering and pain on God. We can do this because God cares for us (1 Pt 5:7.) When life gives us more than we can handle, we can rest in the reality that God can handle it.

If we're honest though, this can seem like a tired phrase. Because when it really hurts, God can seem so far away. This is where we, the church, come in. We need each other to move ahead.

In times when life becomes unmanageable, we need to be willing to walk alongside one another. When we do this, we put flesh and bone on the person of Jesus. We can be with one another in the midst of suffering, helping each other carry the weight. Which means, that we, as the Body of Christ, have an opportunity.

When we are willing to sit in the pain, to walk with one another when life's path is difficult and to shoulder one another's burdens when they are too heavy, we become an embodied promise. We become living proof that while life can sometimes be too much, through the goodness of our loving of God displayed within us, we can move forward together.
